

company d

podcast

Maine's Civil War Soldiers. Their Stories. Our History.

Company D is a narrative history podcast uncovering the true stories of the Third Maine Infantry Regiment. Through diaries, letters, pension files, and forgotten records, each episode brings one soldier's life into sharp, emotional focus—raw, riveting, and real.

Why It Matters

Maine sent more men per capita to the Civil War than almost any state. Their stories are foundational to our communities, families, and collective memory. Company D preserves and shares these stories in a modern, engaging way accessible to all.

Good for

Maine history programs; genealogy groups; adult education classes; Civil War enthusiasts; local history newsletters; community Facebook pages; and school projects.

How to Listen

- Website: companydpodcast.com
- Spotify, Apple Podcasts, YouTube
- Scan the QR code

Featured Episodes

- Ep01: The Mystery of the Missing Captain: Alfred S. Merrill of Alna and Bath disappeared on the battlefield 160 years ago. Newly uncovered research finally reveals what happened to him.
- Ep05: The Carpetbagger: Henry H. Shaw of Woolwich, shot four times in the war, later helped found Princeville, North Carolina—the first incorporated Black town in the United States.

Contact: companydpodcast@gmail.com