

A narrative history podcast uncovering the stories of the Third Maine Infantry Regiment.

From left to right: Capt. Alfred S. Merrill of Pownal; Lt. Woodbury Hall of Woolwich; and Sgt. Albion K. Kennerson of Windsor.

Preserving the stories of Maine's Civil War soldiers — one man at a time.

Introduction

A NEW MAINE HISTORY RESOURCE FOR YOUR MEMBERS

Dear History Friends,

Your organization works every day to preserve the stories, documents, and local histories that define Maine's identity. Company D was created with that same purpose in mind.

This narrative history podcast brings forward the true stories of the soldiers of the Third Maine Infantry Regiment—men from Sagadahoc, Kennebec, Lincoln, Cumberland, Knox, York, and Androscoggin counties whose lives are preserved in diaries, letters, pension records, and Maine newspapers. These stories reveal the everyday Mainers—farmers, shipbuilders, fishermen, laborers, and immigrants—whose wartime experiences shaped the communities we know today.

Featured Episodes

Ep01: The Mystery of the Missing Captain

He was listed as missing. Then declared killed. Then reported wounded and captured. For more than 160 years, the final fate of Captain Alfred S. Merrill has remained a mystery. In the debut episode of Company D, we uncover the truth in “The Mystery of the Missing Captain.”

Ep03: Albion Kennerson’s Confederate Brother

James Kennerson leaves Maine for Alabama—and within months is forced into marriage and then enlists with the Confederacy, fighting against his two brothers in Union blue. Brother against brother isn’t a slogan here; it’s the Kennersons’ life, and the Civil War runs straight through their front door.

WHY THIS PROJECT MATTERS

Company D brings Maine's Civil War history to life one soldier at a time. It is especially valuable for:

- Local history enthusiasts
- Genealogy researchers
- Schools and educators
- Civil War study groups
- Community members curious about the human side of the war

Our mission is to preserve and share Maine stories—one regiment, one company, one soldier at a time.

HELP US PRESERVE MAINE'S CIVIL WAR HISTORY

If this aligns with your mission, we'd be honored if you would consider:

- Sharing the podcast with your members
- Featuring it in your newsletter
- Posting a link on your website or Facebook page
